Summary of Activity for the Advisor:

1. Ask players to form groups as quickly as you call out different criteria:
 - Form a group of two players; now four; now six
 - Form a group of six people wearing sneakers (or a particular shoe color)
 - Form a group in which at least one person is wearing red socks (or no socks)
 - Form a group consisting of a red, white, and blue article of clothing.
 - Find a person who shares your birthday month and form a group.
 - Form groups of three with the same eye color.
 - Form groups of morning people and night owls.
2. Do this several times. Keep the pace fast.
3. Continue experimenting with new group ideas.

Read/Review/Discuss/Do with students:

- Ask students for ideas about which group ideas to explore.
- What new information did you learn about each other?
- Why is it important to recognize a wide range of subgroups?
